GUIDELINE 1

Keep the Value, Cut the Fluff

The goal is to be concise, not rushed. Cut out unnecessary pauses, mistakes, and filler words—but never sacrifice the clarity of your core message. Let the important moments land.

☐ My Note to Editor:

Please remove all awkward pauses, "ums," and mistakes. But please do NOT rush through these key moments:

1. _____
2. _____
3. _____

Guideline 2: Let the Message Breathe

[ ] GUIDELINE 2: LET THE MESSAGE BREATHE

When a key graphic or text appears on screen, give your viewers time to read it. Don't rush past important information. Your audience needs those extra seconds to absorb what you're showing them.

> ⏱️ THE GOLDEN RULE:
>
> Hold important on-screen text for 3-5 seconds minimum

The Most Important On-Screen Text Is:

(List 1-3 key text overlays, titles, or graphics that viewers need time to read)

1. _____

2. _____

3. _____

> 📝 INSTRUCTIONS FOR MY EDITOR:
>
> Tell your editor exactly how long to hold each graphic or text overlay. Be specific!
>
> _____

Guideline 3: Control the Speed

Use speed ramping to guide your audience's attention. Slow down important moments to add emphasis, and speed up repetitive or less important parts to keep viewers engaged.

🐢 Slow Down

WHEN TO USE:

EXAMPLES:

- → Complex mouse clicks or keyboard shortcuts
- → Critical steps in a tutorial
- → Important on-screen text or graphics
- → Moments requiring focus and attention

Slow down during these moments:

⚡ Speed Up

WHEN TO USE:

EXAMPLES:

- → Repetitive actions or setup
- → Waiting for files to load
- → Scrolling through content
- → Less important transitions

Speed up during these moments:
